3 TOTAL CHAOS Fabrication Inc. suspension equipped vehicles competed in the 2006 Por Las Pampas rally starting March 8th in Argentinian Patagonia and finished on March 16th in the region of Atacama, Chile. Competing against FIA Rally caliber drivers these 3 competitors bolted on suspension systems produced by TOTAL CHAOS Fabrication Inc. located in Corona, CA and raced against some of the worlds best drivers across some of the most brutal terrain. Founded in 1998 the rally has grown in magnitude and overall distance to challenge drivers 6000 Kilometers to reach the checkered flag. It is recognized by some of the worlds best racers and this year 23 cars and 37 bikes signed up for this years challenge.

Driver Alejandro Briones #119 from Chili entered a Toyota Hi Lux equipped with the TOTAL CHAOS Caddy Gen 2 kit and finished 7th place overall in the rally and first place in class Type 1.2. Via e-mail Alejandro Briones stated, "Just got back. Totally amazed with the results. Due to the short time we had to prepare, so many things could go wrong. But things went our way the whole race! The suspension held up for us perfect as it is still intact after 6000 km and 9 days of grueling terrains. We are still stunned with the results, first place in our class (T1.2), seventh in the overall and best Chilean team!!! We were the best privateer team."

Briones also entered a second Gen 2 Caddy kit vehicle as a chase crew/film crew to document the rally.

TOTAL CHAOS Fabrication also had a 2005 4wd Prado driven by Jorge Latrach #117 entered in Type 1.2. Despite encountering radiator problems early during leg 4 of the rally Latrach, a true competitor, repaired the Prado and continued. Latrach forged the entire distance completing every kilometer of the 9 leg rally for a total of 6000 kilometers running the newly released TOTAL CHAOS Fabrication 2005 Tacoma 4wd long travel suspension system.
